THE EXCELLED.

BY A. DAPHNE BROWNE.

Now pour thy liquid melody! Thou bird of sable wing! And forth upon the breezy air, Thy echoing music sing!

Sing of a green-wood home, thou bird!

And melt thy heart away

In a dream of its trees and clust'ring flowers,

And its fountain's silvery spray.

Sing thou of these, for a mocking one Sits waiting thy silence now, To weave in stranger notes the song From thy own forest bough.

Then let thy sweetest strains be hear The purest theme have way; That in the notes a spell of power, May chain the mocking lay!

The song hath ceased; the captive bird By thought of home inspired, Hath given all of melody That tonebing theme required.

In vain, in vain the mocking-bird Hath caught the gentle tone, And to thinc ear sent back the song, E'en clearer, sweeter, than thine own!

And higher, higher mounts the strain, Triumphantly it floats, Above the wavy air that erst Scarce trembled with thy notes.

Now, dark one I once again,—but stay, Why is thy crest so low? Why hast thou veiled thy clancing eye, And dimm'd its brightness now?

Thou art excelled | thy thrilling tone
Of joy is hushed for aye,—
And never will thy home again,
Echo to that sweet lay!

Thou hast heard a stranger tongue Warble thy own soft strain,— And never will thy proud heart woo Its music back again!

HYMN FOR EMANCIPATION.

BY OLIVER JOHNSON.

Slavery was abolished in the British West Indies, August Ist 1884; and, in all the Islands except Antigus and the De mudal (where Immediate Emancipation was winely preferred by the loca-Legislatures,) was succeeded by a system of apprenticeship, which worked so badly that, on the lat of August, 1886, the blessings o utilize freedom were substituted in its place.

That shout of the freedmen barsts aweet on our ears!
Their bynn full of jov hear it swelline!
Their bynn full of jov hear it swelline!
Their bears throb with pleasure, their eyes fill wit tears,
As end, the hard bondage of many long years:
Now, exultant, with pride they are telling—
"Free, free awe from the slave's lard yoke!
Freemen, faithful freemen—freemen our fetters have broke!"

Now praise to JEHOVAH the might of His Love
At length o'er the foe is prevailing;
His Truth was the weapon, and by it we strove,
In the light of His Spirit sent down from above—
B'en His Love and His Truth never falling;
Thanks, thanks unto Goo! now the slave is free!
Freedom I holy Freedom! FATHUR, our thanks :

Thee!

Thee 1 17.

Alas I that to-day on Columbia's shore
The grouns of her slave's are resounding!
On plains of the Sauth their rich life-blood they pour I
Of reemen's blest freemen J your help they implore!
It is Slavery's wail that is sounding!
Hark I load comes the ery on the Southern gale—
"Freedom! Death or Freedom! Freedom or Death must prevail!"

O ye who are blest with fair Lineary's light,
With coursee and hope all aboanding.
With weapons of love be ye bold for the right;
By the presching of truth put oppression to flight.
Then, your allars trimphant surrounding.

But wake and strive anew,

And present wrongs take here dof,

What heavts can feel and heads can do

The present day hath need of.

The present day hath need of.

Why seek in olden somes,
In ancient late and story,
For levends of your wrones,
And traces of your glory?

Have ye not heats to be
The home of free aspiring?

Have ye not eyer to see
The chain that ye expire in?

Than wake your hopes one' more—
You more than even need them—
And raise from hower to shore
The thrilling cry of Feedom;
And be the past forgot,
When it hath ceased to wound us;
But slep—60, sleep ye not,
While present chains are round us.
